

What I didn't understand:

In the paper "Detecting Clusters of Players using Visual and Gameplay" I didn't understand the way they determined the number of clusters to use. They used several indices, but all of these were either just an equation that I didn't understand or not really explained. Other than that, I think I understood everything.

In the other papers, I didn't really encounter anything I didn't understand.